Quintin Behn & Daughter Abby

Asleep during the early morning hours, Quintin Behn and his wife Angie were awakened by their three kids claiming they smelled smoke. After investigating, Quintin quickly realized there was a fire in his garage. He began dousing the fire with a garden hose. "It was very stupid to think that I could put the fire out. I had no idea that a fire could raise so quickly," he says.

In the mean time, Quintin's 16-year-old son Jordan called the fire department, and Angie gathered everyone else across the street. Joshua, Quintin's oldest son, grabbed the garden hose out of his hand and accompanied him across the street. They and their two dogs were safe.

"In the process, we weren't thinking about shoes or clothes, and I wasn't thinking about the weather. Before we knew it this wonderful Red Cross truck pulled up and gave us things that we take for granted; things like toothbrushes and soap." Quintin says. "It was cold enough that the truck was beneficial."

"I have a whole new respect for the Red Cross." Quintin says. "I offer my deepest thanks."
